Course information

Course outline

Each topic is presented in the form of a video of approximately 5 minutes in length. Watch them at your leisure, download them to save them for later, participate in the discussions, and see how much you've learned by taking the assignments afterwards. The estimated time for completing this course is approximately 8 hours. Of course, you're welcome to discuss each session as long as you'd like!

Grading policy

The core philosophy of this course is 'learning by doing' as well as 'learning by participating.' Therefore, what is valued most and graded accordingly, is the effort you put in and the experiences you have. This will be graded based on completion of the assignments as well as participation in discussion forums whereby quality is more important than quantity. This means we especially encourage engaging with the wider DHIS2 community on forums and reflecting upon learnings in relation to use cases that are personally meaningful.

Timeline
You have until the 11th of May to complete all the material

Grades:
Grades are broken down as follows:

The pass grade for the overall course is 70 %:
- 40 % for final exam
- 50 % for the assignments
- 10 % for participation in discussions (minimum of 2 contributions)

Final exam
The final exam will be based on the all material and will be structured according to the various units of the course.

Assignments
In each unit, typically at the end of each video, there will be one or more assignment(s) which encourage you to apply the knowledge you have gained from studying the material by solving a challenge. This challenge may be presented in the form of multiple choice questions, but will also come in more interactive forms. The more assignments you do, the more you will get out of the course. You are also free to tailor your experience in the course to your own interests and goals.

Participation
You are encouraged to participate in the discussion forums in ways that are comfortable to you. For this, you will be asked to shortly introduce yourself in the forum and contribute with a minimum of 2 posts.
